Water damage clean-up professionals bring years of experience and knowledge in the water, fire and disaster restoration industry

Suwanee, GA (PRWEB) September 21, 2010

Cara Agerbeck and Jim Anders have joined Abatement Technologies to expand sales and technical support of the company's water restoration equipment, products and chemicals to water, fire and disaster restoration contractors. Both individuals are based at the company's Suwanee, GA headquarters.

Cara Agerbeck takes on the role as National Sales and Marketing Manager Restoration. Cara is an IICRC Master Restorer & Cleaner (Institute of Inspection, Cleaning and Restoration Certification) with many years of hands-on structurally drying and water restoration experience as general manager for a large restoration company. Most recently, Cara was regional sales manager for the nation's largest cleaning and restoration products distributor. She serves on the board of directors for the Society of Cleaning and Restoration Technicians and is a former IICRC WRT instructor.

"We are excited to have Cara on our team as we expand our offering of water mitigation solutions to help restoration and mold remediation professionals provide rapid response and improve quality of service to their customers," says David Shagott, president of Abatement Technologies.

Jim Anders is responsible for providing technical assistance and sales support for Abatement's line of water clean-up and structural drying solutions. Jim's professional career includes responsibility for national sales of a patented structural drying system to restoration contractors with the goal of expanding the customer base. Additional professional experience includes years as a structural drying specialist, marketing mitigation services to insurance companies and training technicians on using desiccant drying technology. Jim also has sales and account management experience in the high tech field. Jim holds certification in water restoration and structural drying.

"Jim is a restoration professional with extensive experience in large-loss estimating, project management and successfully helping customers grow their businesses in the water restoration industry," notes Dave Shagott.
